NOTE TO AUTHORS:

Articles submitted are carefully considered by all members of the Editorial Committee. Editorial changes suggested by them are referred to the author for approval before being sent to press or, in the case of minor punctuation change for clarity, when galley's are sent to the author for correction.

No free reprints can be furnished. Use of cuts or drawings requiring special processing are at the expense of the author.

Prices for reprints of articles appearing in GROUP PSYCHOTHERAPY are based on printer's quotation, subject to change according to current costs. Authors are advised of printer's prices at time of paging.

Manuscripts and communications for the editors should be addressed to the Editorial Committee of GROUP PSYCHOTHERAPY, Beacon, N. Y., and not to an individual. Unsolicited manuscripts which are not accepted for publication will be returned if accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Manuscripts must be neatly typewritten and submitted in duplicate.

It is hereby understood that all articles are accepted for exclusive publication in this journal. Articles printed in GROUP PSYCHOTHERAPY become the property of Beacon House Inc.

FOREWORD

It is with the greatest amount of gratification that I have seen the tremendous bibliography on group psychotherapy compiled by Dr. Raymond J. Corsini and Lloyd Putzey. Little did I think a short quarter-century ago when I coined the term "group psychotherapy," and when in the succeeding years I watched the slow halting uncertain steps of this new discipline as it matured that some day there would be a bibliography of more than a thousand and a half items.

Group psychotherapy is not the province of any single discipline nor is it the exclusive area of any profession; group psychotherapy belongs to all; and it is in all its complexity, with all its confusions, an essential part of humanity. It represents an almost desperate search for brotherhood, a looking for that state of complete acceptance of self and others, the arrival of a time when each person can be himself and exercise his complete potentialities. It is a revolution in psychotherapy: an escape from the priest-class towards the masses.

"A true psychotherapy," I have written, "cannot have less an objective than the whole of mankind." Group psychotherapy, in its one hundred and one forms, is an expression of this idea. I am happy that I have played my own little part in its beginning and in its development.

The bibliography by Corsini and Putzey has been deliberately established in a form to make it convenient to extend in the future. It is hoped that at five year intervals, new editions will appear, corrected and amended as well as extended so that it will serve as the basic reference to this topic.

I can only wonder at the amount of scholarship, patience and energy needed to search, check, compare, type, correct and edit this historic volume. I believe that all who are interested in group psychotherapy owe a profound debt of gratitude to the compilers of this volume, offering as they do the most complete summation of this field.

J. L. Moreno, M.D.

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography contains entries of all known books, chapters in books, journal articles and theses concerned with group psychotherapy published from 1906 through 1955. The material is arranged in three separate sections: a main entry by year, in which the items, with complete citations, are to be found arranged alphabetically; an author index; and a subject index.

The form used is designed to make the bibliography convenient for the user and compatible for any future edition. Every entry has a code number: the first two digits represent the year in which the item appeared, and the next three digits indicate the position of the item within the year's listings. Thus, 47054 means that this particular entry appeared in 1947 and is the 54th alphabetic item in that year.

Selections

Entries were obtained in four main ways: (a) from other group psychotherapy bibliographies (46065, 50068, 50012 and 54109), (b) from standard reference sources such as the Psychological Abstracts, (c) from citations found in various books and journal articles, such as 53116 and 55074, and (d) by searching journals likely to contain items in this field. Some 1700 items were obtained making this bibliography approximately three times as extensive as the most complete to date.

Abbreviations

In order to save space, three abbreviations were used consistently in the titles: GP—Group Psychotherapy, GT—Group Therapy, and PD—Psychodrama. For the same reason, a list of special abbreviations of journal titles were employed for those publications referred to most often (see page 179). For other journals, the standard abbreviations as suggested in The World List of Scientific Publications published in the years 1900 to 1950, 3rd edition, Psychological Abstracts and Quarterly Cumulative Index Medicus were used.

Additions and Corrections

Although we have striven for completeness and accuracy, the reader may find omissions and errors. The compilers would appreciate information about items missed, errors, and omissions of subject entries. The additions and corrections will be included in any future edition or revision.

Acknowledgements

Encouragement and financial support were given us by Dr. J. L. Moreno, editor of Group Psychotherapy. Mrs. Anne Stevens patiently and resolutely struggled with sometimes puzzling notations to render acceptable copy. Debby Putzey, Lucy, and Evelyn Anne Corsini contributed many hours at various stages of the preparation of the manuscript.
